Conflict happens. It is simply a natural part of life, whether at home, the workplace, or in the community. Conflict can be a healthy process as long as participants believe they can trust one another. In fact, the ability to resolve conflict with integrity is likely to make our relationships stronger. We don’t have to agree with one another, we simply need to show genuine trust and respect. Our panel of business professionals will provide real life examples for resolving conflicts while maintaining integrity.
